FARM FAMILIES USED LOAN FACILITIES

Farm families in Appomattox County have made good use of Farmers Home Administration credit and services this past year and have stepped up the efficiency of their farming operations, Wm. J. Leftwich, the agency's county supervisor headquartered at Rustburg, said this week.

Additional funds have been made available, he said, to lend through the next year to farmers who operate, buy, enlarge, or improve farms.

A large portion of the money loaned in this county during the past 12 months has been to veterans and other farm families who are establishing better farm setups. Their greatest needs were for adequate credit and some help in developing sound systems of farming and adopting efficient farm management practices. No loans were made to farmers who were able to obtain the financing they needed from other local lenders.

A total of $16,090.00 was loaned in the county for equipment, livestock, fertilizer, feed and seed, that farm families needed to make better use of their land and labor resources.

Farm housing loans amounted to $8,000 and Special Livestock loans totaled $2,350.

The county office of the Farmer's Home Administration serving Appomattox and Campbell Counties is located in Rustburg.

REPRODUCTION EFFICIENCY OF DAIRY COW FAMILIES STUDIED AT VPI STATION

Is inheritance a major factor when it comes to reproduction in dairy cattle?

Paul M. Reaves, professor of dairying at VPI, reports that cow families in the three beards at the college were studied for the reproductive abilities of the individual cows in the families. The method of measurement was to assign a value of 100 percent for an animal which produces a calf for each 12 months beginning three months before the first service as a heifer and extending to th time of her last calf.

The Holstein herd was grouped into 6 cow families. The reproductive efficiency by families varied from 84 to 99.3 percent.

The Jersey herd included 12 families which ranged from 74.3 to 103 percent in efficiency.

The Guernsey herd showed a percentage range of 82.5 to 105 percent on cow families.

Recording of information is continuing, and more data is being accumulated, Reaves said.

PRICE OUTLOOK FOR JULY VEGETABLES

Ups and downs in the price field for various vegetables are forseen for July by marketing specialists at VPI.

Lima bean prices should be steady at $2.25 to $2.50 per bushel for U. S. No. 1. Snap bean supplies from the late spring states, including Virginia, are likely to be up 14 percent from 1953 and may cause price drops. Dry weather seems to be affecting the quality of the crop in the east.

Cabbage supplies for July are estimated at 5 percent below average. There may be some price strengthening.

The mid-summer crop of cantaloupes is below last year by at least 2 percent. But prices are down from 1953 but should stabilize near present levels this month.

Acreage of sweet corn is up about 20 percent from 1953, but dry weather has cut yields and quality. Prices have dropped, but should stabalize near present levels for high quality corn.

There has been about a 4,000-acre increase in cucumbers in states marketing in July. This should increase production by 10 percent, and prices are expected to drop.

Onion prices have been $1.50 to $2.00 per bushel. Well-stored onions may be sold for more. The crop is about 9 percent below average and down 23 percent from 1953.

Heavy supplies of peppers from North Carolina are expected to weaken present prices of $2.50 per bushel.

Prices of potatoes should stabilize and show some strength in July as demand is expected to exceed supply at present price levels for good quality.

Early sweet potatoes sold immature and uncured in July are expected to cause drops in prices. Further declines are likely to occur in August and September. Growers are advised to cure and store Porto Rican type sweets for sale out of storage in the spring of 1955.

Excessive supplies of tomatoes may cause further price drops and heavier sales to canneries than in 1953.

A ten percent increase in watermelon production is noted. Prices may go down this month.

VIRGINIA'S WATER SYSTEMS PROGRAM NATIONALLY RECOGNIZED

A farm water system program in Virginia for 1954 has won national acclaim from the American Association of Agricultural Engineers.

At the recent meeting of ASAE in Minneapolis, Minn., the Virginia program, as described in a brochure prepared by the Virginia Rural Electrification Council, was placed top in the nation in the education program division.

The brochure points out that more than 95 percent of the farms in Virginia now have electric service. But there are about 80,000 farms in Virginia with electric service that do not have water under pressure. A pressure water system, the brochure states, is one of the most valuable assets for the home and farm.

The program is a coordinated effort on the part of agencies and organizations working with rural people to bring the benefits of running water to more rural homes. The goal for 1954 is to install 10,000 pressure water systems in Virginia.

Membership in the Electrification Council, which spearheads the program, includes professional agricultural workers, farm organizations, and electric service organizations.

Two staff members of the agricultural department at VPI participated os officials at the the ASAE meeting. E. T. Swink was chairman of the rural electrification division, and J. H. Lillard is a member of the steering committee of the soil and water division.
